Village school choir wins national contest

[P1] A choir of twenty-eight pupils from a village school in Vanir has won a national singing contest for the first time. The group performed two pieces, including a lullaby arranged by their music teacher.

[P2] Judges said the choir was chosen for its clear diction and careful dynamics. The pupils travelled to the final by bus with parents and teachers, and returned home late in the evening to a small celebration at the school.

[P3] The school plans to use the prize money to repair its music room roof. The teacher said the group will keep rehearsing through the summer and hopes to enter again next year.
